With the prospect that the cities could not be pleased with any of the proposals now pending, the leaders agreed it was too late to try to reopen the whole subject.

The decision is a big disappointment to Senator Tolbert and other home rule advocates, who believed they were on the wcy to solving the old, troublesome question. Political leaders don't like the outlook. They say the Republican Legislature has handed to the Democrats a good campaign issue to be used next autumn. Decision to swap all home rule proposals was reached to-day by Senator Lusk and Speaker Machoid, leaders of the majorities in the two houses, after conference with the Governor, who was asked to draft a home rule amendment to substitute for all the masures, but declined.

"This thing ought to be done with a great deal of care; it is too important to do in a snap way," the Governor told the leaders. Following that came the suggestion that the whole subject be turned over to a commission of ten or fifteen prominent citizens, representing the cities of the State, who would work it out with great care.

ome rule bill stood a most excellent chance of becoming a law, barring un-foreseen opposition, was expressed by representatives of the State Conference of Mayors and of other civic organiza-tions following a conference in this city yesterday noon.

Changes in phraseology suggested by Gov. Miller on Thursday to former Mayor William J. Wallin of Yonkers, chairman, and two other members of the legislative committee of the Mayors' conference were agreed to. It is the understanding that with these changes the Governor will support the bill when the committee confers with him again to-morrow.

It was agreed by the conferces that the proposed phraseologylcal changes in no wise affected the essential features of the bill. But Corporation Counsel John P. O'Brien, who had invited the conference to meet in his office, said the city administration wanted more. He sought to discuss the socalied home rule bills introduced at the instance of Mayor Hylan, but it was made clear to him that the subject under discussion was solely the Tolbert bill.

ling these billions of our money further away from the allurements of Wali Street. They may not hereafter be such prominent figures in the speculative world, but they will be better officials.

Points to Mutual Life.

"This is especially true of the Mutual Life, which has actually reduced its mortgage investments fifty per cent. since 1912 and has at the same time lost many millions of dollars of its policy holders' money by hanging on for years to the stocks that it was directed by the Legislature to sell.

"If the insurance lobby is sufficiently strong to defeat this bill, to which there is no answer, what is the use of spending money on investigating committees? It cost the State $50,000 in accountants charges (and we thought they were well spent) to prove these facts by the com-

Lewisohn, former treasurer of the Municipal Government Association, and Assistant Corporation Counsel William E. C. Mayer, John F. O'Brien and John Lehman. Albert Linke, a former Democratic Assemblyman, who said he represented the Home Rule League of Kings County, at his own request was permitted to sit in.

Features of Measure.

The main features of the Tolbert bill,

It grants to all cities definite powers to regulate their own municipal and property affairs through the adoption of local ordinances not inconsistent with the State constitution and laws.
 It provides that the legislature may not pass any more bills applying strictly to local matters.

It is the so-called emergency clause that prevents the complete divorcement.

of the municipality from State control. This provides that the Legislature may pass legislation for cities whenever the Governor shall have attested its necessity in an emergency message and the existence of the emergency shall have been concurred in by not less than two-thirds the membership of each house. There is said to be not the slightest chance that any part of Mayor Hylan's socalled home rule program, introduced by Senator McGarry of Queens, will pass the Legislature.

Flemming, manager of the W. J. Rainey & Co. store at Allison, Pa., and C. O. Evans, chief clerk, were robbed of $30,000, the company's mine payroll, by six bandits who held up a trolley car three miles from here to-day. Elmer Hill, who accompanied Flemming and Evans as guard, was shot, but not seriously wounded. The bandits escaped in an automobile.

"While I am not permitted to disclose what the testimony before the Grand Jury was I deem it proper to state that Blickman testified that not only had he given $3,000 to Kenneally, but that he had gone to luncheon with Kenneally and had spent at least an hour in Kenneally's company. Parker was asked if women were mixed up in the case and he replied: "I do not believe so. I think this was done by a person seeking revenge because of a business deal."

Mrs. Harry Mohr, Mrs. Bruen's mother-in-law, and Brunen's daughter, Mrs. Hazel Parkstrew, were not in the house at the time of the murder, but were attending a moving picture show in Riverside. Brunen's daughter eloped several months ago and was married to Paul Parkstrew, a lion tamer in the circus. Brunen caused the arrest of Parkstrew, who spent a week in jail before he was discharged by Judge Herald Wells. Parkstrew moved to Perth Amboy, where he is living. After the murder Parkstrew was found at his home and he proved he was on Ferth Amboy when the crime was committed.

Last Christmas Day Brunen and his wife quarreled and Mrs. Brunen fired five shots at her husband with a pistol. None of the bullets took effect: "Now, I'll show you how to shoot," the Riverside police yesterday said Brunen said to his wife as he took a revolver and fired. The bullet struck a corset steel. No arrests were made, as the couple patched up the quarrel.

Brunen, who was known as "Honest John" in circus circles, was born in Germany, and came to this country when he was it years old. His first position was in a shooting gallery at Coney Island. He worked there several years and then secured a concession for himself in the resort, and last year sold out for $40,000. He ran several carnivals throughout the Middle Atlantic, New England and Southern States, and recently bought an animal show and was preparing to send it on the road.

His first wife died several years after their daughter was born, and fifteen years ago he married Miss Mohr, whose father was a Philadelphian and who had an interest in the carnivals. Mr. Mohr died several years ago.

The police do not see any connection between the murder of Brunen and the robbery of the Brunen home in July, 1920, when two bandits entered the house during the absence of Mr. Brunen and compelled Mrs. Brunen to hand over $5,000 in cash and jewelry.
